Over the Gate.

Over the garden gate bends a man,
Giving a maiden taffy;
Somebody's getting as mad as he can—
'Tis her sire—Cornelius Mahaffy.

Over his bunioned feet, hand-like hands
Are pulling his boots on quickly;
Still at the garden gate Oscar stands,
Soon will his smile be sickly.

There's a whizzing sound and a smothered cry;
She's alone like a house that is haunted;
But happily for him there's a doctor nigh,
Who will put amica just where it is wanted.

CONSUMPTIVE LEMONADE.

He loitered at the festival,
A goblet in his fist,
A wishy-wash fluid brimmed
The mangle his lips kissed.
Quoth he: "I wish that I could get
A pair of trousers made
For summer wear as thin as this
Consumptive lemonade."
—Yonkers Gazette.

DEAN STANLEY.

Dr. Arthur Peurhyn Stanley, one of the most eminent scholars and liberal men in the church of England, died on Tuesday. Dr. Stanley had occupied a foremost position in the Church since his appointment as Dean of Westminster in 1864. The distinguishing characteristics of his life may be summed up, as the celebrated scholar Max Muller designated them, "loyalty to truth his singleness of purpose, his chivalrous courage, and his unchanging devotion to his friends." Through all his life he remained true to this estimate made of him by one never given to sentiment, and who was always critical. Nothing more remains to be said for him; no man could wish for himself a more noble epitaph than this.

Americans will never forget that he was the friend of the United States. On the occasion of his last visit to this country in '78, he was honored by all, and he took occasion while among us to say kind words, and on his return home his kindly expressions were couched in stronger terms.

His elevation to his high ecclesiastical position was the result of accident. But he exhibited in that office such qualities, that all were willing to acknowledge that he was deserving of this preferment. He was at one time tutor or traveling companion to a young nobleman, heir to one of the first peerages of England. His young master having fallen hopelessly in love "below his station," his relatives were greatly exercised as to how he should extricate himself from his embarrassing matrimonial complication. Mr. Stanley married the young lady, whom the nobleman had determined to marry, and who was the daughter of a British clergyman. In taking to himself a wife he won the gratitude of a powerful family who were the means of securing his recognition at court.

He was soon after, in '58, appointed chaplain to the Bishop of London. He was a great favorite with Queen Victoria, and was chaplain-in-ordinary the Queen. He was also chaplain to the Prince of Wales, whom he accompanied on his tour in the East. He filled high positions in Oxford University, first as a fellow, then tutor and examiner, and later as Professor of Ecclesiastical History.

In 1872 he was appointed one of the select preachers before the University. He had always been liberal in church matters, and when his name was mentioned for this position he was strongly opposed by the High Church party.

He was the author of fifteen works, mostly theological in character, and among them a biography of Dr. Arnold, the venerable master of Rugby School, having been a favorite pupil of his.

He was in his sixty-seventh year when he died, having been born in 1815. He was the son of a learned clergyman, who was afterwards Bishop of Norwich.

Dean Stanley was censured by a large class for his sentimental obduracy in insisting that a statue to Prince Louis, son of Eugenie, Ex-Empress of the French, should be set up in Westminster Abbey. Despite the protests of an intelligent and distinguished class, the Dean still clung to the hope that he might please his Queen by carrying out her expressed wish that the memory of the young Frenchman, who was killed by the Zulus, should be honored by a monument to his memory, even though it should be placed among those erected to the honor of Great Britain's greatest poets, historians, novelists, philanthropists and statesmen.

NEW MANAGER OF THE A. T. & S. F.

There has been considerable curiosity to know who would succeed Col. W. B. Strong as General Manager of the A. T. & S. F. R. R., now that that gentleman has become President of the road. Some have imagined that Mr. George O. Manchester, the present Assistant Manager, would become Manager, but his friends believe that he would not accept the position if offered him. He will probably continue to serve as Col. Strong's assistant and remove to Boston with the President. Of the others likely to succeed to the Managership are Mr. George H. Nettleton, President and Manager of the Kansas City, Lawrence & Southern Kansas R. R.; and Mr. A. E. Touzalin, General Manager of the Burlington & Missouri River R. R. in Nebraska. Mr. Touzalin will undoubtedly secure the position if he desires it. He was formerly Land Commissioner of the A. T. & S. F. and it was through his instrumentality and by his enterprise that the lands of the Company were sold. He is the best railroad manager in the west, and in numerous instances has he got the best of the Union Pacific Railway and Jay Gould's representatives. He has more qualifications for the position than any probable candidate, great influence and strong backing.

In commenting on this probable appointment the Chicago Tribune says: The appointment of Mr. Touzalin would still more cement the friendship between the Burlington and Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroads, as Mr. Touzalin has been connected with the Burlington for many years past, and is an intimate friend of Mr. C. E. Perkins, Vice-President of the Burlington. In case Mr. Touzalin accepts the new position, it is not likely that the position of General Manager of the Burlington & Missouri River, in the Nebraska Branch of the Burlington, will again be filled. The duties of the position will no doubt devolve upon Mr. T. J. Potter, General Manager of the Burlington east of the Missouri River.

Mr. F. L. Parker is likely to receive the appointment of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad, in case Mr. Manchester receives the appointment of Assistant to the President.
